GREENOCK.

THE name, Greenock, appears to be derived from the British Graenag, signifying a gravelly or sandy place; or from the Gælic Grianach, signifying a sunny place: either of these derivations is sufficiently applicable to Greenock, which has a sandy and gravelly soil, and is finely exposed to the sun on the margin of a beautiful bay. The latter derivation agrees best with the fact, that the bay, besides being denominated after St. Lawrence, was also at one time called the Bay of the Sun. The town is situated in the lower ward of Renfrewshire, upon the Southern shore of the firth of Clyde, 22 miles distant from Glasgow, in lat. 55. 57. 2. N., long. 4. 45. 30. W. The site which it chiefly occupies is low and close to the shore, but is bounded on the south by a high ridge of hills which rise abruptly behind the town, in picturesque grandeur, to the height of about 800 feet, interspersed with numerous beautiful villas, which give a charm to the bold scenery with which they are surrounded.— Opposite the eastern part of the town lies the bay alluded to, which was named after a small chapel dedicated to St. Lawrence.

At an early period, Greenock consisted of two baronies, Easter and Wester, the former of which is the suburb of Cartdsyke, properly Crawfordsyke, from a wall or quay built by Thomas Crawford, the proprietor, who obtained a crown charter in 1669, confirming the one granted by Charles I., constituting it a burgh of barony. The castle of Easter Greenock stood about a mile east of the town, at a place called Bridge-end, and that of Wester Greenock on the site of the Mansion-house.— This barony belonged to a family named Galbraith, and in the reign of Robert III. it was divided between the two daughters of Malcom Galbraith, one of whom married Schaw of Sauchie, and the other Crawford of Kilbirnie. The two divisions were long held as separate baronies—West Greenock by the Schaws and East Greenock by the Crawfords—till 1669, when Sir John Schaw of West Greenock purchased the eastern barony, from the female heir of Crawford, and thus became the proprietor of the whole.

Before the Reformation, the inhabitants, few in number and widely scattered, possessed only three small chapels for religious worship. The one dedicated to St. Lawrence, stood on the site of the house at the west corner of Virginia Street, and continued in some preservation till 1760; a second on the lands of Chapelton at the extremity of the eastern boundary of the East Parish; and a third, dedicated to St. Blane, a little below Kilblain. These chapels were swept away amid the wreck of religious houses at the Reformation, and the inhabitants of the barony of Greenock were afterwards obliged, on the Sabbath, to travel six miles, through bad roads, and over dangerous rivulets, to the church of Innerkip. Much inconvenience being found from the great distance of the parish church, John Schaw of Greenock obtained, in 1589, a charter from the king, authorising him to build a church for the accommodation of the tenants and inhabitants of his lands of Greenock, Finnart, and Spangock; and he and they were exempted from any further attendance at their “auld parish kirk” of Innerkip, and from all taxations or imposts for upholding the same. This grant was ratified in parliament in 1592. At the time of this grant, there was no mention of any town on the barony of Greenock; the inhabitants are described as the “puir pepill duelling vpon his lands and heritage, qlks ar all fischers and of a reasonable nowmer.”

The proprietor having obtained this charter, erected a church and manse, and set apart a piece of ground as a churchyard. On the 4th of April, 1592, the synod of Glasgow authorised the burying of the dead in the new kirkyard. In 1594, another act of parliament was passed in favour of John Schaw, by which his lands, with all their titles and ecclesiastical duties, were disjoined from the parsonage and vicarage of Innerkip, and erected into a distinct parsonage and vicarage, which were assigned to the newly-erected parish church. The parish continued as thus established till 1636, when there was obtained from the lords commissioners for the plantation of churches, a decree whereby the baronies of Easter and Wester Greenock, and various other lands which had belonged to the parish of Innerkip, with a small detached portion of the parish of Houston, were erected into a parish to be called Greenock, and the church formerly erected was ordained to be the parochial church, of which Schaw of Greenock was the patron.

In 1684, no harbour had yet made its appearance; the want of which being severely felt, Sir John Schaw, in 1696, and again in 1700, applied to the Scottish Parliament for aid to build a harbour, but both applications were unsuccessful: the inhabitants having now received an impulse that could brook no further delay, and seeing the capabilities of their natural haven to be converted into a magnificent harbour, with a spirit of enterprise that has continued to increase with the prosperity of the town, voluntarily made an agreement with their superior to assess themselves in 1s. 4d. sterling on every sack of malt, brewed into ale within the limits of the town, to defray the cost of a proper harbour. This harbour, which was then the largest in Scotland, was formed by building an extensive circular pier round a straight one, known as the Mid Quay. This important work was completed in 1710, at an expense of upwards of 100,000 merks—equal to £5555 11s. 1d. sterling. Such was the consequent increase of trade, that this sum, although large, was actually cleared off in less than thirty-five years. This first expression of public spirit has been followed up by other and more extensive improvements, so that scarcely a trace remains of the original structure. After the completion of the harbour in 1710, Greenock was established a custom-house port.

The Union having opened up its full prospects to the commerce of Scotland, the harbour of Greenock came rapidly into importance. A dock was built in 1785, at the expense of £4000, and it was soon found, from the increase of trade after the conclusion of the American war in 1783, that a new and more commodious one was indispensable. Between 1773 and 1817, six acts of parliament were passed for regulating the affairs of the port. It was not till 1818 that the Harbour Trustees were able to carry their plans into effect; and the work was finished in 1824, at the expense of £20,000, but the harbour and new Dry Dock, with the lots of ground for warehouses, bonding yards for wood and other conveniences, have at least cost £119,000, including the erections eastward—all the works are commodious and elegant. The East Quay is 531 feet in extent; entrance to the harbour, 105 feet. Custom-house Quay, 1035 feet; entrance to the harbour, 105 feet. West Quay, 425 feet; entrance, length from east to west, 2201 feet; breadth of piers, 60 feet. The Quays run into deep-water, and are approached by the steamers at any state of the tide; and those of the largest class can be admitted into the harbours. Vessels of any burthen have sufficient depth of water, and good anchorage in the stream.

Previous to 1772, the harbours belonged to Sir John Schaw, but were subsequently purchased by the Magistrates and Council of Greenock. At this date they occupied eight acres, three roods and ten falls, all of which had been gained from the sea, during a period of seventy-two years. They now occupy a space of more than twenty Scotch acres. The management of the harbours is vested in the Town Council and other Commissioners, who are elected annually.

The result of these gradual and extensive improvements has been productive of a great increase in the trade of the port; and whether these enlargements of the harbours are considered, or the contemplated new Wet Docks both to the east and west of the present harbours, the depth of water or the riding ground—the port of Greenock is, at the present day, unquestionably entitled to rank as the first and best in Scotland.

During the 17th century, Greenock had acquired some shipping, and, under the fostering care of the baronial families, had begun to engage in foreign as well as coasting trade, both of which rapidly increased. In 1684, a vessel is stated to have sailed from the bay with a number of persons sentenced to transportation to the American colonies, being persecuted on account of their religion. The first vessel belonging to Greenock crossed the Atlantic in 1719. The growing prosperity of the port excited the jealousy of the London, Liverpool, and Bristol traders, who got up a charge that the merchants of Greenock and Port-Glasgow defrauded the revenue, which was unfounded, and refuted. Herrings, its earliest trade, is still extensively carried on, many thousands of barrels being cured annually; and the tobacco trade, first brought from the colonies and exported to the Continent, was followed at an early period of the eighteenth century. The Greenland whale fishing commenced in 1752, but is now discontinued. The American War and its consequences greatly depressed Greenock, but new channels of commerce were soon found, and its trade is now with every part of the habitable globe, where British merchandise can find a market, or foreign produce supply the wants of the British people. The most important part, however, is with the West and East Indies, North and South America, and the Mediterranean.

The following Tables exhibit the imports and exports of Greenock from 1830 to 1840 inclusive, also the number of vessels and amount of tonnage belonging to the port:—

In connexion with the trade of Greenock, the improvements made in steam navigation form no inconsiderable feature. Previous to 1812, the only mode of conveyance for passengers on the Clyde was by fly-boats, which were about 28 feet keel, from  $7\frac{1}{2}$  to 8 feet beam, about eight tons burthen, and wherry-rigged. A slight deck or awning was erected abaft the main-mast, so as to cover in the passengers, who sat in the after-part of the boat, upon longitudinal benches, similar to those in the canal boats. Some of the boats had a contrivance, by which part of the deck or awning might be lifted up on hinges, to permit the passengers, on a good day, to look about them, and enjoy the voyage. Such were the conveniences of the Fly boats. They generally started from Greenock with a flowing tide, and, if the wind happened to be fair, they made no bad passage, all things considered; but if the wind and tide were adverse, no little labour was required to get them a-head; and sometimes, under these untoward circumstances, both passengers and crew were glad when they got as far as Duglass, there to remain till the next tide favoured their advance. The cheapness of fare in these boats, which was one shilling and sixpence, strongly recommended them to the patronage of the public—coach-travelling being then very expensive.—An ingenious individual, Mr. Andrew Rennie, having conceived it practicable to improve upon this mode of conveyance, caused John M'Kechnie to build a boat of larger dimensions, to which he affixed two wheels, one on either side; these were wrought by manual power, and were intended to supercede the use of oars. This boat, which went by the appellation of "Rennie's Wheel-boat," made several trips to the Broomielaw, but was soon after sold, being found that the labour of the oar was less toilsome than that of the wheel. This unsuccessful experiment, however, did not deter another individual, destined to become more celebrated as a mechanist, from embarking in a similar scheme:—Mr. Henry Bell employed Mr Nicol to build for him a boat, about fifteen feet keel, with a "well," or opening "in the run," in which he placed a wheel, which was wrought by manual force as a propelling power; but finding this wheel not to answer the purpose intended, he closed up the "well in the run," and placed two wheels, one on either side, which were found to answer much better than the single wheel in the inside. This experiment was made some time before Mr. Bell fitted out the Comet with a steam engine as a propelling power. What influence the one experiment may have had in suggesting the other is unknown, but it is by no means improbable that a very intimate connexion did subsist between them in his mind, and that the second was a natural result of the progress of the first. Mr. Bell's indomitable spirit was not to be deterred from making another effort, and the building of the Comet was the result of his perseverance, which was crowned with success.

From this beginning of steam navigation, improvements have succeeded in rapid succession, and the Comet, of 40 feet keel, 10 feet 6 inches beam, 25 tons burden, and an engine of 3 horse power, prepared the way for those floating palaces, so often seen on the bosom of the lovely Clyde, whose splendour and power fill the mind with astonishment, and form one of the most magnificent gifts that skill and ingenuity have ever awarded to the industry of man.

In connexion with the Port, ship-building is carried on to a great extent. Upwards of 2,200 men are employed in this branch alone.

The following note of men employed and wages paid weekly, and of vessels launched, and on the stocks, from May, 1840, to May, 1841, will give some idea of the extent of this branch of local business.

There are at the present time, in various stages of construction, five steamers of the largest and most beautiful description, these are—the Tay, and the Teviot now on the stocks ; the Solway newly launched ; the Tweed in the course of receiving her engines ; and the Clyde nearly ready to proceed to sea. They are Government ships, and, in point of size, have the appearance of seventy-four gun-ships. They are intended to carry the mail between Great Britain and the West Indies.

Boat-building, though a part of the former, has rather assumed the form of a separate branch. Mr. Thomas Nicol alone has built nearly 8000, extending, in lineal measurement, to upwards of thirty miles.

There are also various other branches carried on connected with the shipping trade well worthy of being noticed. Cordage and sail-cloth are extensively manufactured, great quantities of which are annually exported. Steam engines, boilers, and other machinery, are also manufactured here on a very extensive scale, and are universally known to be of the first description. In the works of Messrs. Caird & Co. 800 men are employed, their wages amounting to £1360 a fortnight ; Messrs. Scott, Sinclair & Co. employ 400 men, and pay £600 wages fortnightly. There are other works where chain-cables are manufactured to a large amount ; also, two iron forges, extensive sail-lofts and cooperages, three breweries, a distillery, two potteries, two soap and candle works, two extensive tanneries, and numerous other branches which afford employment to a large portion of the inhabitants.

On the falls of the Shaws Water (afterwards to be referred to) are situated, an extensive flax-mill, a paper-mill, various flour-mills, with a rice mill (the only one in Scotland), a saw-mill, and dyeing and other chemical works on an enlarged scale.

Here also is erected an extensive cotton-mill embracing two falls, of 32 feet each, possessing the power of 120 horses. This work is calculated to give employment to 600 persons. The foundation stone was laid on the 15th June, 1838, on the same day with that of the railway—with the same masonic honours—and it is a remarkable coincidence, that both were also opened on the same day. The mill is an oblong building, 300 feet in length, 65 in width, and four stories in height. The elevation is plain but chaste and elegant. The centre portion projects, with a pediment on the top, and finishes with an octagon belfry, on which is a vane resembling a first-rate steamer. There is a staircase at each end of the mill, of very easy ascent, and with spacious landing places. The wheel itself is the largest and most magnificent structure of the kind in the world. It measures 70 feet 2 inches in diameter, or 220 feet 6 inches in circumference, and, with the stream furnished by the Shaws Water Company, it will work equal to 130 horse power; but, from the capacity of the buckets, and the strength of its parts, it is capable of working up to 200 horse power with a full supply of water. It is constructed on what is called the tension or suspension principle; the shrouding or outer rings of the wheel being braced to the centre by 32 chain cable iron bars or arms,  $2\frac{1}{2}$  inches in diameter, and an equal number of diagonal braces of the same thickness. The axle of the wheel is of cast iron, and weighs 11 tons. The bearings in which the wheel revolves, are 24 inches long and 18 inches in diameter, resting in cast iron bushes. The centre or naves, into which the arms and braces are fixed with gibs and cutters, are 10 feet in diameter, and weigh  $8\frac{1}{2}$  tons each. They are of a ribbed form, with punched covings, and have prominent sockets for receiving the ends of the arms. They have a rich and elegant appearance, and the arms radiating towards the periphery of the wheel, give an impression of lightness to the ponderous machine. The shrouding is of cast iron, and 17 inches in depth. On the side which is not covered by the gearing, there are two sunk pannels, with a neat "egg and dart" moulding all round the styles; and in the body of each pannel, there is a very elegant branch of the water lily in bas relief, which has a very handsome effect, by relieving this part of the wheel from that inexpressive plainness which is usual in such structures, and yet does not partake of that inappropriate expression of misplaced ornament, which too often gives a ginger-bread appearance when applied to large machines. The weight of the wheel is 117 tons. The shrouding is composed of 64, and the teathed segment of 32 pieces, containing in all 704 teeth. The buckets are 160 in number, and each will contain 100 gallons of water. The sole of the wheel is constructed of iron plates, fastened with no fewer than 20,000 rivets. The spur wheel and segment pinion, which works in the teathed segment of the water wheel, weighs with its shaft 23 tons, and the pinion and main shaft into the mill weigh 13 tons. The spur wheel, the diameter of which is 18 feet 3 inches, revolves at the rate of 600 feet per minute, and the whole act together so smoothly that not the slightest shaking or noise is perceptible.

Likewise a worsted manufactory, capable of giving employment to between 300 and 400 individuals, has commenced operations. The building is 144 feet long, and 43 wide. Including the combing flat, which is principally under ground, it is four stories in height; and we understand it is intended to add a wing to the west, to furnish additional store and warehouse room. The proprietors, Messrs. Neill, Fleming, and Reid, have now got a considerable portion of their machinery in active employment, and more is in course of putting up. They are now making superior worsted yarns of different degrees of fineness, varying from Nos. 12 to 36, which are used for the manufacture of carpets, table covers, tartans, shawls, mousselines de laine, Orleans cloths, &c. When full, the manufactory will contain about six thousand spindles, with the requisite machinery for preparing the wool for the spinner. It contains apparatus for sixty combers, and has, besides, an equal stock of carding machines. The machinery is driven by one of Messrs. Whitelaw and Stirrat's patent water mills. It is found to do its work remarkably well, so far as it has been tested, and promises, when fully loaded, to do all that its ingenious inventors engaged it would perform. Messrs. Neill, Fleming, and Reid, speak of it as a remarkably regular and steady power. It is meant to work up to the force of 53 horses. Velvet has been manufactured by Messrs. R. Whytock & Co. of Edinburgh, from yarn spun at this manufactory. It is a beautiful article—has more the appearance of silk than worsted—has given its experienced and skilful manufacturers the highest satisfaction, and demonstrated the excellent quality of the yarn produced.

Greenock has ever been remarkable for a laudable enthusiasm in the advancement of its commerce ; so much did this spirit prevail, that it is only of late years that arts and manufactures have found a place in its improvements. But, from an extraordinary exertion of mechanical power in the formation of a series of waterfalls, for miles along the heights above the town, a new impulse has been given, and Greenock is now rising to eminence in her manufacturing as well as in her commercial importance. This extraordinary undertaking was brought into operation by the ingenious Mr. James Thom of Rothesay, who perceived the possibility of collecting the water of a considerable number of small mountain-streams into one channel, and of conducting them towards the town in such a way as, within the space of little more than a mile upon a descent of five hundred and twelve feet, to give power to no fewer than thirty-two water-mills! A Company, under the title of the "Shaws Water Company," was constituted to carry the design into effect, with a capital of £31,000, which was completed in April, 1827, at an expense of £52,000. The reservoir is an immense artificial lake in the bosom of the hills behind the town, at an elevation of 500 feet above the level of the sea, from which an aqueduct passes along the range for six and a-half miles. It covers nearly 294 $\frac{1}{2}$  imperial acres, and is capable of containing 284,678,550 cubic feet of water ; a compensation reservoir covers 40 imperial acres, and contains 14,465,898 cubic feet of water. There are also several auxiliary reservoirs, calculated to contain above 6,000,000 cubic feet, so that the whole together will contain upwards of three hundred and ten millions of cubic feet of water! The power supplied for machinery, at given distances, will yield nearly an equivalent to that of two thousand horses, working at the rate of twelve hours per day. Self-acting sluices, most ingeniously constructed, prevent the danger of any overflow, and completely preserve the water during the greatest floods. In the vicinity of the town it pours down a torrent, forming a series of the most beautiful falls, on which are situated the extensive works already referred to. The water for supplying the domestic purposes of the inhabitants is also drawn from this source and collected into reservoirs set apart for the purpose. From these a separate aqueduct conveys the water to the filters, which are situated above the town, where a basin is formed which yields an abundant supply of pure water.

There are also several large sugar refineries, some of which are in active operation.

The Gas-work was erected in 1828, at an expense of £8831. Considerable additions have since been made which have cost £8000. The works are situated at the west end of the town, and present a chaste and handsome appearance.

In July, 1837, a company was incorporated by act of parliament, for laying down a railway between Glasgow and Greenock, passing through Paisley, with a capital originally of £400,000, but now increased to £500,000. The foundation-stone was laid at Greenock on the 15th of June, 1838. This railway was opened on Wednesday, the 31st of March, 1841, for the conveyance of passengers and parcels; and arrangements have since been made to insure by steam-boats a more speedy and effectual communication with the various villages and watering places which beautify and adorn the estuary of the Clyde. The undertaking has been of immense magnitude, and presented physical difficulties of no ordinary kind. But these being now overcome, the advantages to be derived will no doubt amply reward the proprietors, and be of incalculable benefit to the public generally. The station-house here, which joins to the Exchange Buildings, has a very neat appearance. It forms a portico of the Corinthian order, having four pilasters, with capitals of that order. At each end of the building there is a semi-circular arch, projecting eight feet from the line of elevation, with plain pilasters. It is an ornament to the situation in which it is placed.

The Greenock Chamber of Commerce and Manufactures, was incorporated by Royal Charter in 1813.

There are seven Banks in the town. The Greenock

Bank, which occupies a part of a large and elegant structure, built in 1839, to the west of the Exchange Buildings, and the Renfrewshire Bank, situated on an eminence behind the Square, are native or private banks, with limited co-partneries. In July, 1840, a prospectus was issued, proposing the establishment of a Joint-Stock Company, to be called the Greenock Union Bank, with a capital of one million sterling, divided into 50,000 shares of £20 each. This bank commenced business on the 22d December last. This is a substantial and satisfactory proof of the wealth of the merchants, as well as the extent of the shipping interest and general business of Greenock. A splendid suit of buildings are about being erected for this company in Hamilton-street. The other banks are branches of the Royal Bank, the Western Bank, the Bank of Scotland and the Glasgow Union Bank, the two latter occupy elegant buildings erected by themselves. There is, besides, a well-conducted Provident Bank, established in 1815, whose deposits at last annual balance amounted to no less than £65,750.

The town of Greenock, notwithstanding its recent date, has assumed an important position in point of extent and population. The first feu, which was granted in 1634, was at the foot of the "Broomy Brae," or what is now called the Tanwork-close; nor does the town seem to have made much progress for some time. About 170 years ago it only consisted of a row of houses near the Rue-End, and a few that lay scattered towards the West Quay-head. So late as 1721, there were only two houses covered with slate. The appearance of the town now is rather neat, but more so towards the west end, where, of late years, a number of fine streets have been formed, and many elegant houses erected. Among the numerous public buildings, the first place is decidedly due to the Custom-House, which is situated near the centre of the harbours, having two fronts, the principal one towards the Clyde and the other towards the new dock, the eastern wing being occupied by the Excise and other offices. The beautiful Grecian style of this building does justice to its situation. The portico is extremely handsome. It was erected in 1818, and cost £30,000. The Tontine, which is a splendid hotel, next deserves notice. It contains a large hall, with twelve sitting-rooms, and thirty bed-rooms. The Tontine Society was instituted, March, 1802, with a capital of £10,000, which was provided in the course of two days by four hundred subscribers of £25 each. The building was commenced in 1803, and finished in 1805. The nominees were declared in the same year to be three hundred and forty-seven, and twenty-three shares were forfeited, the subscriptions not being paid. The shares are now reduced to two hundred and thirty-seven, one hundred and forty shares being annulled by the demise of upwards of one hundred of the original nominees. The White Hart Inn is also a large, commodious, and well-conducted Hotel. Nearly opposite the Tontine are the Exchange Buildings, finished in 1814, at the cost of £7000, containing two spacious Assembly Rooms, and other apartments. Behind the Exchange Buildings is the Theatre, built by the celebrated Stephen Kemble. The Town-Hall and Public Offices were planned in 1765 by James Watt, and finished the following year. The Police Office, to which considerable additions have lately been made, is connected with these buildings; and it is worthy of remark, as regards the present management and efficiency of the Police establishment, that these are not surpassed in any other part of Scotland. The Jail or Bridewell, in the castellated style, situated in an open space, and enclosed by a high wall, was erected in 1812, and the Hospital or Infirmary, about the same time. The Mechanics' Institution is a handsome building; the Gardeners' Hall, the Masons' Lodge, and various other edifices, for utility and ornament, are equal to those of other Scottish towns. In 1695, the villages of Greenock and Crawfordsdyke did not contain more than 1000 inhabitants; in 1755, they had increased to nearly 3000; in 1791, the population amounted to 15,000; in 1801, it rose to 18,400; in 1811, to 20,000; in 1821, to 23,000; in 1831, to 27,571, and in 1841, to—(See end of Directory.)

In viewing the rise and progress of Greenock, it may be proper to remark that, previous to 1751, it was managed by the Baron himself or his deputy; but by a charter from Sir John Schaw of that date, the power to elect a regular magistracy was vested in the town, to consist of two bailies, a treasurer, and six councillors, with power to make laws for the advantage of the burgh, the maintenance of peace and good order, of "seizing, arresting, imprisoning and otherwise punishing transgressors and delinquents, conform to law."—For this purpose the magistrates fitted up a thatched house, situated at the bottom of the Broad-close, to be used as a Jail or Black-hole; there the jugs were hung, as an admonitory warning of the consequence of bad conduct, and, for the same laudable purpose, another set of jugs were affixed at the West Quay-head, on a house called the Inspector's Land. This insufficient place of confinement was soon dispensed with, and the keep, or as it was called the "Massay More," of the Mansion-house was substituted in its place till 1765—the family having ceased to reside there in 1754. The west portion of the Town Buildings was afterwards used as a prison, till the erection of the Jail and Bridewell. The town is governed, since the passing of the Burgh Reform Act, by a provost, four baillies, a treasurer, and sixteen councillors. Greenock returns one member to parliament; parliamentary and municipal constituency in 1841, 1168.

The town now contains three civil parishes; viz.: the West, Middle, and East; and five quod sacra, viz.: the South, North, St. Andrew's, Cartsydyke, and St. Thomas. The West Kirk, which, till 1741, was the only place of worship in Greenock, is situated close to the shore. It is in the form of a cross, with a small belfry on the west, and stands in the middle of an extensive burying-ground, where (in passing it may be remarked) lies almost unnoticed and unknown, the grave of Highland Mary, the object of Burns' purest attachment, and the theme of some of his finest effusions. This place of worship, as such, has been abandoned, and a new and elegant one, capable of accommodating 1400 sitters, is erected in Nelson Street, and was opened on the 14th of May, 1841. The Middle Kirk is in the centre of Cathcart Square. It has a portico of the Ionic order, with an elegant steeple 146 feet in height, and finished in 1787. The other parish churches are plain neat edifices, with the exception of St. Andrew's, which is a beautiful Gothic building, from a design by Mr. Henderson of Edinburgh. There is also an Episcopal chapel of the Gothic style; a Roman Catholic chapel; a new Congregational chapel, of a light and elegant Gothic architecture, from a design by Mr. Baird of Glasgow; three chapels connected with the Secession Synod; one of the Relief Synod; one of the Reformed Presbyterian Synod; one Baptist; one Methodist; one belonging to the Irvinites; one for seamen; and the Universalists, the Unitarians, and the Chartists have also places of worship.

There are various seminaries for elementary instruction—the Grammar School, with a rector and mathematical teacher, is under the control of the magistrates.—The Highlanders' Academy, embraces an infant and juvenile school, conducted upon the same principle with the Normal schools in Edinburgh and Glasgow.—The building, erected in 1836, is of plain and neat architecture, and has attached a large play-ground, tastefully ornamented with shrubbery.—There are also a Charity School, a Female School of Industry, and numerous private schools, where the various branches of mercantile education are successfully taught.

The Institutions of Greenock, though not numerous, are of an important kind, and highly capable of advancing its inhabitants in the more useful branches of economical knowledge. The Exchange Coffee-Room, instituted 1814, is elegantly fitted up, and well supplied with metropolitan and provincial newspapers, periodical publications, and works giving information upon commercial subjects. The new Coffee Room, instituted 1820, is situated in a neat building at the east corner of Cathcart Square, and is also well supplied with newspapers, various literary periodicals, and works on nautical matters. Strangers are admitted to both, free of expense.—There are other reading-rooms on a smaller scale.—The libraries are extensively supplied with the best works in the various branches of literature and science.—The Greenock Library, instituted 1783, contains upwards of 10,000 volumes, and has above 200 subscribers. In 1807, a library of foreign literature was commenced, and, now greatly enlarged; in 1834 it was annexed to this library.—The Cartsdyke Mechanics' Library, instituted in 1830, contains above 1500 volumes, and has about 300 readers.—The Greenock Mechanics' Library, instituted in 1830, contains above 2000 volumes, and has about 300 readers. There are several circulating libraries, and others belonging to religious bodies.—The Greenock Medico-Chirurgical Association, instituted in 1818, consists of medical practitioners in the town and neighbourhood, who meet once a month; it has a library amounting to about 900 volumes, and a museum.—There are two local newspapers—the Greenock Advertiser, published on Tuesday and Friday, and the Observer, on Wednesday; the former was commenced in 1799, and the latter in 1840; also the Clyde Commercial List, commenced in 1802, published on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday.

The Mechanics' Institution may be justly entitled a School of Arts, having for its aim the mental, as well as the mechanical, improvement of the class to which it belongs. Much praise is certainly due to the individuals whose exertions have been the means of bringing it to its present prominent position. The building was erected in 1839, at an expense of £1600, and contains a splendid suit of rooms for the accommodation of the Institution. The Lecturing Hall, a well-lighted and spacious room, is 60 feet long 36 feet wide, and has sittings for upwards of 600 individuals. Besides the Library Room, another is in course of finishing, to be used as a public Reading Room, and will be supplied with newspapers and other suiting periodicals. Another large apartment is intended to be fitted up with necessary apparatus as a Class Room, for instruction in mathematics, naval architecture, and other branches of knowledge connected with the arts and manufactures of Greenock.

Greenock is celebrated as the birth-place of the illustrious James Watt; here he spent his infancy, and breathed into existence the first emanations of his splendid genius; here his birth-day is celebrated, and his memory cherished. The commerce and the arts of Greenock have claimed him as their own ; and his name embellishes the page of its early history. In honour of this great man, the James Watt Club was instituted some time ago, composed of gentlemen belonging to the town, and honorary members in other places. The club-room is in the James Watt tavern, which stands at the bottom of William-street, on the very spot where Watt was born. In 1836, a large and elegant building, in the style of old English architecture, after plans by Blore, was erected in Union-street to his memory ; towards the erection of which, his son, Mr. Watt of Soho, in the most handsome manner, contributed £3000. Opposite the principal entrance, in a recess, is placed a beautiful marble statue of Watt. The expense of the statue was defrayed by subscription. On the front of the pedestal is an inscription written by Lord Jeffrey, on the right, a shield containing the arms of Greenock, and on the back, an elephant, in allusion to the parallel drawn by the celebrated writer of the inscription between the steam-engine and trunk of that animal. The following anecdote of Watt is highly illustrative of the first dawning of his splendid talents and unrivalled skill :—One day observing the boiling of the tea kettle, his attention was directed to the steam that was issuing from the spout. His conduct attracted the notice of his aunt, Mrs. Muirhead, who felt irritated at his apparently trifling occupation. “James,” said she, “I am surprised to see you trifling your time in that way ; do you know what you have been doing ?—There you have been sitting this whole hour without speaking a word to any body, and have done nothing all that time but open and shut, and shut and open the lid of the tea kettle ; then you have held the saucer in the steam, and collected the drops upon the silver spoon, losing your time in idleness—Can’t you get a book and employ yourself usefully ?—Are you not ashamed of yourself ?” It is often thus that guardians and parents unintentionally crush the first blossoms of infant genius. Little did his aunt know that he was discovering the application of steam to a purpose that was to multiply the comforts, add to the happiness, and increase the enjoyments of the whole of the human race, and laying the foundation of a mechanical invention that was to open up new sources of industry, and to disclose new channels of national wealth.

In drawing this rapid sketch of the rise and progress of the town of Greenock to a close, it may be remarked, that perhaps few towns in Scotland have equalled her in the rapid advances she has made in the arts and manufactures. The enterprising spirit of her merchants has also been accompanied with a corresponding improvement in taste and refinement. New and elegant buildings are constantly being erected; the streets are daily becoming more spacious; and the shops and public places of business may be said to be vieing with each other in metropolitan splendour: independently of these, the magnificence of her docks and harbours—the extent of her building yards, and the skill and ingenuity of her artizans, have been such as to carry her fame to the most distant parts of the world. Year after year is giving the assurance that Greenock at no distant period is to become a favourite seat of well applied industry and enterprize:—her improvements are conducted upon a magnificent scale—from the gigantic crane upon the East Harbour, erected at an expense of £3000, and capable of lifting sixty tons by the power of only six men, to the collected streams of Shaws Water, that, by an exertion of mechanical ingenuity, pour their contents upon the ponderous wheels that give motion to the vast machinery erected upon its falls. The resources of Greenock are inexhaustible; and, as has been well remarked,—“With an admirable and safe roadstead in her front—with spacious docks in her bosom, with a numerous and well-found mercantile navy feeling its way into every port on the habitable globe—with a series of waterfalls coming thundering down in her rear—with the means both of river and railway communication between her and the two most extensive communities in the West of Scotland on her flank—with scientific marine architects, practical ship-builders and engineers, unsurpassed in fame—and, with wealth and spirit to avail herself of all these advantages—this ocean queen of Western Scotia has a splendid destiny before her.”

In consideration that the Church of St. Thomas was built chiefly for the relief of the Middle Parish, while in the above arrangement the West Parish has been principally relieved, and with the view of adding to the efficiency of the parochial system generally in Greenock, the Presbytery agreed that the following district should, quoad spiritualia, be detached temporarily from the Middle Parish, and annexed to the West, viz., that district bounded on the west by the Cowgate and High Vennel; on the north by Hamilton Street, including the east sides thereof, from Market Street to Hamilton Street, including the south side thereof, from High Vennel to Manse Lane; on the east by Manse Lane, including the west side thereof, to Market Street; and on the south by the northern boundary of the West Parish, from Shaw's Land to the Cowgate.

Parish Register of Births and Marriages, from January, 1838, to January, 1841.

| YEAR. | EAST PARISH. |           | MIDDLE PARISH. |           | WEST PARISH. |           |
|-------|--------------|-----------|----------------|-----------|--------------|-----------|
|       | Births       | Marriages | Births         | Marriages | Births       | Marriages |
| 1838  | 100          | 58        | 68             | 98        | 170          | 196       |
| 1839  | 84           | 57        | 69             | 108       | 168          | 180       |
| 1840  | 59           | 77        | 43             | 100       | 122          | 201       |

It will be observable that the number of births bears no proportion to that of marriages; which, according to the best writers upon political economy, ought to be nearly in the proportion of five of the former to one of the latter. The above statement shows a very great neglect on the part of parents and others, who ought to attend to this important duty. The necessity of an accurate registration of births ought to be impressed upon all heads of families, the advantages of which must be obvious to every one, while the disadvantages which often result from the omission are grievous and annoying.

DIRECTIONS FOR THE RECOVERY OF THE DROWNED.

WHEN the cold corse shall have been brought to land,
Strip off its clothes with an industrious hand;
Cleanse well the mouth, th' obstructed nostrils clear,
And let each passage drink the vital air;
Wipe dry the body, wrap a blanket round,
Or some such covering as can best be found—
Nay—lend thy coat—'tis sweet a life to save,
And snatch a brother from a watery grave.
Then on a plank, with head and shoulders high,
Convey the body to some cottage nigh.

Now let good order and good sense prevail,
And no confusion make thine efforts fail.
With common air the breathless lungs inspire:
Blow the faint sparks of unextinguished fire,
(For yet perhaps some embers may remain
Ready to kindle into life again):
Rub well each limb—a genial warmth impart
Around the stagnant regions of the heart;
Then down the gastric tube a cordial throw,
Some draught, to make the internal organs glow;
Should thy best judgment pierce the jug'lar vein,
Take heed! in time the vital stream restrain,
Lest thou too much from nature's fountain pour,
And so destroy the life thou wouldst restore.
Thus on proceed to rouse the dormant breath:
Ply the strong oar and struggle hard with death;
Nor cease thy toil till life's bright flame return,
Or till the lamp at length refuse to burn,

HENRY RITCHTER, SEC.

INSURANCE from Loss or Damage by Fire hath been found a measure of great importance to the security of property, and to the happiness of families. This precaution is seldom neglected by Merchants and Tradesmen, and is equally necessary to Gentlemen, Farmers and Manufacturers of every kind. The promptitude and cheerfulness with which the most important losses have been made good by the Company are well known;—a large Capital in Government Securities is at all times held in readiness for that purpose;—and in addition to that Indemnity which Insurers are bound to supply, the Company has constantly attended to the convenience and accommodation of the public in the mode of transacting the business of the Office.

LIFE ASSURANCE.

THIS CORPORATION RANKS AMONGST THE FIRST AND MOST FLOURISHING COMPANIES IN SCOTLAND; supported by a large and influential body of Proprietors; giving to the Assured every advantage hitherto offered to the Public.

The PREMIUMS are moderately rated at all ages; and are so modified, by ascending and descending scales, and otherwise, as to suit the object of every Insurer, at the least immediate outlay, whether to secure a debt, provide for his family, or to convert income into capital for his own use.

When an Insurance is for the WHOLE PERIOD OF LIFE, ONE HALF OF THE PREMIUMS ONLY REQUIRE TO BE PAID FOR THE FIRST FIVE YEARS AFTER THE DATE OF THE POLICY, the other half may remain unpaid, subject to the payment of interest at five per cent. annually, to be deducted at death, or may be previously paid off at convenience. It obviously becomes easy for a person of very moderate income to secure, by this arrangement, a provision for his family; and should he, at any time after effecting the Insurance, succeed to or acquire a fortune, he may relinquish his Policy, having only paid one half the Premiums for the first five years, instead of the whole, as in other Companies.

PARTICIPATING POLICIES share in the Profits without payment of Entrance-Money, or incurring the risk attending Mutual Assurance.

BONUSES may either be added to the sum Insured, or applied in reduction of future Premiums. The last Bonus (declared December, 1837,) averaged thirty-seven per cent. on the Premiums paid.

LOANS are granted to Policy-holders without expense, on approved personal security.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

LIFE INSURANCE is an object of the first importance to every class of society, yet many persons are entirely unacquainted with its peculiar advantages, or with the extent and universality of its application to the concerns of life. The following are a few only of the most obvious cases in which it may be resorted to:—First. By persons, whose Incomes are dependent upon life, or upon professional or public employments, as those in the Army, the Navy, the Church, the Law, or in Government or Public Offices, who, by appropriating a small portion of their yearly income may secure an adequate and certain provision to their Wives, Families, or Dependents, or create a Fund disposable by Will.—Second. A Fund for a Marriage Settlement may thus be secured by those who are not possessed of independent property.—Third. Capital invested in Annuities, or in Securities upon Life Interests, may be rendered permanent by insuring the lives of the parties on which their continuance or existence depends.—Fourth. Creditors may secure Debts by insuring the life of the Debtor; and Debtors, and Persons mortgaging their Estates, or whose Estates are charged with Legacies or other payments, may, by an annual payment, make Provision for liquidating their Debts, and releasing their property from such incumbrances, by which their Estates will descend free to their families.—Fifth. To Parents, educating and putting out their Children to expensive Professions or Trades, or otherwise making advancement for them: and Persons whose Incomes depend upon the Lives of their Employers, Life Insurance secures, in the event of death, a repayment of the one, and a certain continuation of the other.—Sixth. To the Owners of Lands on Leases for Lives, the above mode of Insurance is peculiarly important, as it affords the means of securing the payment of the sums necessary for the perpetual renewal of such Leases, and thereby rendering the Estate nearly as valuable as Freehold; and generally it affords the means of certain indemnity against any pecuniary Loss, Claim, or Inconvenience whatsoever, to which one individual may become subject by reason of the death of another; and is applicable to all classes of the community, giving to each the opportunity of securing to their Families and Dependents a source of independence and enjoyment.

Advantages offered by this Company upon Life Insurances.

1. A reduced scale of Premiums, and no liability of Partnership.
2. A PARTICIPATION IN THE DISPOSABLE SURPLUS PREMIUMS ON POLICIES for £100 and upwards, to be ascertained at the end of every fifth year from Christmas, 1827, which may be applied either in reduction of the original Premium, or be added to the Sum assured as a Bonus, and payable therewith.
3. Naval and Military Officers are charged only the same Premiums as other persons, except when called into actual service, and are entitled to the same advantages.
4. Payment of Claims in Three Months after the usual proofs.
5. No Entrance Money or Admission Fees are required, and no Charge is made for Policies except the Stamp duty thereon.
6. Permission to pass, in Steam Boats or Decked Vessels, from British to Foreign Ports, between the Texel and Brest, both inclusive.

THE Protestant Dissenters' and General Life and Fire Assurance Company has been established with a view of calling the attention of a numerous and influential section of the community to the importance of providing, by means of Life Assurances, for the future interests of their families. Though the aggregate amount of Life Assurance has enormously increased, experience proves that this increase has principally taken place among professional men in good practice, persons enjoying comfortable incomes, and those who are engaged in the higher departments of trade and commerce; while individuals of limited means, and those occupied in the more ordinary pursuits of agriculture, manufactures, and trade, very generally neglect to assure their lives, seeking to provide for their dependent families by employing their surplus income in the slow process of gradual accumulation. Daily experience unfortunately furnishes too many instances where early death prevents the attainment of this object, and the members of a bereaved family are then left to deplore the consequences of rashly speculating upon the lengthened duration of life, when, by the employment of the same sum in an Assurance, they would have been entitled to its protection the moment after the Policy was effected.

The circumstances of the Protestant Dissenters of this country are exactly such as render this mode of investment most advisable; while there is reason to conclude that as yet they have availed themselves of it to a very limited extent. It was thought by the projectors of the present Company, that an Institution bearing their name and conducted principally by members of their own body, would be more likely to awaken the attention and command the confidence of Dissenters, than the several Offices previously existing. Under this impression the Company has been formed, and it will be the peculiar care of the Directors to avail themselves of the extensive means of influence and channels of communication which they possess, to convey a knowledge of the advantages of Assurance to every town and village in the United Empire; and, in order that they may extend, as far as possible, the benefits now enjoyed by the more opulent, to classes which have as yet been scarcely reached—facilities will be given for effecting small policies—an object favoured by the legislature, which has recently reduced the stamp duty, payable in respect of policies of that description.

Another object contemplated by the Company is an appropriation of a tenth part of the profits of the general business, to the benefit of the families of Dissenting Ministers. By this feature of their plan, the Directors hope to be enabled, from time to time, to effect such reductions in the Premiums of Ministers assured in this Office, as will induce them, or their congregations on their behalf, extensively to avail themselves of the advantages of the Institution. The benefits that would accrue to the Dissenting body from the provision which may thus be made for the Widows and Children of deceased Ministers need not be pointed out to those who are intimately acquainted with its interests.

In calculating their Tables for Life Assurance, the Directors have adopted the course recommended by Mr Babbage, as being in their judgment the more equitable and business-like than the plan generally taken. Having ascertained, by the calculations of eminent mathematicians “the real value and risk, and consequently the amount of premium just sufficient to meet it,” they have added to this “such a per centage as will defray the expenses of management, and allow of a sufficient dividend to the proprietors, whose capital is a guarantee to the Assured.”

Annuities, both immediate and contingent on Survivorship, will be granted; and Reversions and Life Interests will be purchased upon equitable terms, having due regard to the interests of the public, and the security and prosperity of the Company.

Some of the most respectable and best established Offices make it one of the conditions of their Fire Policies, that the Insured, in case of loss, shall procure a Certificate from the Parochial Clergyman and Churchwardens, of his character and circumstances, and of the amount and particulars of his loss. The “Protestant Dissenters’ and General Assurance Company” propose to receive, from sufferers belonging to their community, the certificates of the Ministers, Deacons, or Elders of the Churches to which they belong. The Company will likewise receive similar certificates of the continuance of the lives of their Annuitants, and of the decease of their Assured.

It will be an especial object of the Company to avoid litigation, and for that purpose they will make provision in their Policies to submit all matters in dispute to arbitration.

Rates of Assurance on Lives without participation in the profits of the Company.—Premium per Cent.
